Comment. As compared with the preceding month, the volume of supply traffic as observed in the Fuerstenwalde area during the reported period increased. The number of cars unloaded rose from 140 to 347 units and thus again reached the normal level. The number of freightcars reportedly made available to the Soviets increased from 212 to 401. This increase probably does not represent an intensification of Soviet supply traffic but seems to be rather due to a better coverage of Soviet shipments. The flow of traffic as reported was previously known and confirms available information. The volume of supply traffic was normal.

[] a Class II Depot. The information that this installation is provided with a mobile printing shop explains the frequent deliveries of paper to the depot.
